Dimitris is a principal for a second-grade school with 400 students in Greece and before becoming the principal, he was teaching IT, Maths, Physics and Sport for more than 20 years. He comes out of a three generation of teachers, is married for 31 years and turns 55 next year. In his duties he has a lot of administrative tasks, but he is very interested in what innovations happen in education and tries to support his teachers in implementing these innovations.

Often, they have to handle financial restrictions as well as restrictions due to the curriculum, but Dimitris tries to provide the teachers a good framework in which they can act flexibly. Thus, he is very open to collaborations also outside the school and tries to keep up with the technological development.

He has a high trust in his IT administrations and he knows that his team of teachers work very well by supporting each other in different projects and initiatives. When supplementing an IT lesson, he would like to give the students the possibility to explore with different systems and understand the basic principles behind it but also foster their soft skills like creativity, their ability of planning, collaboration and creation. At the same time, he looks out for systems that are easily accessible, moderate in costs and highly effective for the students.
